University of London (England), 1889
General practice

Dr. Leeder practised in England before moving to Canada and settling in Victoria in 1908. “He was active in his profession until within three years of his death, when he retired on account of illness,” his CMAJ obituary stated. “Such is a brief epitome of 50 years of active medical practice. His professional attainments are attested by his associates . . . and his work was nationally recognized by his appointment as President of the CMA.” Dr. Leeder also served as an examiner for the College of Physicians and Surgeons of British Columbia and as President of the Victoria Medical Society. He died in 1945.
