Dr. George Ross, MD

CMA President, 1887
McGill Medical College, 1867
General practice

Upon the death of Dr. Ross in 1892, the Maritime Medical News reported that “the death deprives the Dominion of one of its most distinguished members.” Dr. Ross served as a house physician at the Montreal General Hospital until being named a professor of clinical medicine at McGill. Teaching was his true forte, the News reported, and he had the ability to “transform for the young mind the dry, hard facts of pathology into living knowledge — he was, indeed, a model bedside instructor.” Dr. Ross died in 1892.
